

Abstract of the Disclosure

The present invention related to a semiconductor device equipped with fuses each made of a conductive material vertically extended through an insulator layer employed in the semiconductor device. Holes are formed which vertically penetrate the insulator layer. Sidewalls are formed on their corresponding wall surfaces of the holes. The holes formed with the sidewalls are buried with a conductive material.